YNOPSIS.

Richard, an American with an affected accent, receives a present from a pair of pajamas. The present proves to be a pair of pajamas. A letter hints of the wearer. Lightnut dons the pajamas and late at night gets up for tea. His servant, Jenkins, comes in to recognize Lightnut, but, after putting him out, thinking the servant, Lightnut changes his clothes and summons help. When he reappears, Lightnut's belief that he is Jenkins tells Lightnut of the end he had with a hideous Chinaman. Next morning, Lightnut asks to put up "the kid" for the on his way home from college. Lightnut finds a beautiful girl in pajamas in his room. Lightnut is led by the girl's drinking, smoking slinky talk. She tells him her name is Francis and puzzles him with a lot of love for her sister's room. Next morning, Lightnut wakes up to find the missing and Lightnut hurries to see her. He is accosted by a stinky college boy, who calls him "Dick". But he does not see the girl. Billings calls to spend the night. Lightnut, then, discovers priceless hidden in the buttons of the pajamas.

OVER IX.—(Continued.) Billings gulped again. "I suppose not," he blurted out. "Way you're fixed, don't have to." He walked slowly to the window and back. "Take my car, Dick, and get those five coals you safe deposit vault first thing this morning. Hello, you're counting them off! That's wise." For the knife he had left on the table was cutting away the tough pads that held the rubies. I cut one second and fourth, leaving that last ruby at the collar and the two alternates.

"Go," said Billings, as I laid down the knife. "You've only removed two."

"Do believe I'll cut off any more," I said. "Want you to help me tie up the others just as they were."

"What?"

I insisted. And though Billings protested and argued and even called me names, we'll as I said.

For, by Jove, you know it was perfectly clear at if they had been safe so long up the little covers, the jewels could find any better place. Singular the Billings couldn't see it. Besides, the jamas had to have fastenings, you know.

I held out the two rubies under the light, as by Jove, I almost dropped it—did my glass. Seeing a red-hot point in your fingers would give you the same turn.

"Rippers, Billings! Simply rippers!" I exclaimed.

I held the other rubies aside for my fellow. Then I waded, listening. And I heard Billings' and strike down on the back of a chair.

"Guess I'll begone, old chap," he said. "Think I'd better, after all. He cleared his throat. "Sure you can't sell me, Dicky?" Dashed it! voice didn't tremble.

"Be sure, dear boy," I murmured, with turning sound. "Not mine, you know—these two."

Billings exploded then. It seemed an opportunity to relieve himself. "Nurs! Why, you dodgasted idiot, you compeop, you cuckoo, you can't head! What notion have you got of fool's middle now? If those rubies are not yours, whose do you think they are?"

Billings exploded quickly. "Yours," I said. "I laid them in his hand."

"Implications old chap," I added. By Jove! One time, at least it all over old Billings!

He gasped, crouching over my shoulder.

"I laid them in his hand," I said cheerfully.

Into a chair and just sat looking at me and then at the rubies. Old boy looked really acted like he had a stroke—that sort of thing.

at him.

"You see?" I said, trying to be jolly. "You wouldn't have known a dog about the buttons better for you. So lucky they are so I can get a chance to do my collection. Awfully glad, old chap."

and the jewels, and looked at them.

He coughed a little huskily. "Dicky," his voice could hardly hear him. "Get off your trolley, and get on your feet."

Billings arm and dropped it. "Mind what," he finished off the shoulders. "I say something. It's a matter for those who price the amount I've given a decent gamble; it could go, and oh, I badly, Dicky! And I feel like a dog, your gift, old chap, could afford to offer up one of those rubies. Here." And he turned to me.

Billings turned to me to be worth fifty thousand dollars. "They're the kind the crowned heads scoop for jewels of state."

I nodded, and, getting up carelessly, I strolled to a window.

"Devilish lovely night," I said, poking my head out. And it was. Stars overhead and all that sort of thing, and lots of them below, too—I could hear them singing over on Broadway.

"All right, old chap; then here they go into the street," I said. "If my friend can't have 'em, then no jolly crowned heads shall. That's flat!"

Billings started forward with a regular scream.

I waved him back. "Don't come any nearer, old chap," I said, holding my arm out of the window. "Or, dash me, I'll drop them instantly. Six stories, you know—stone flinging below."

"But, Dicky—"

"If you don't say you'll take 'em, time I count three, I'll give 'em a toss, by Jove! One!"

"Here, Dicky! Don't be a—"

"Two!" I counted. No bluff, you know; I meant jolly well to do it.

"Just one word—one second, Dicky!" he yelled. "Let me off with one, then. Dicky! Dicky, old chap! Be a good sportsman!"

I hesitated. Dash it, one hates to take an advantage.

Billings stretched out his arm appealingly. "Do, old chap!" he pleaded. "Give me just one—one only!"

His hand shook like a quivering what's-its-name leaf.

I yielded reluctantly. "Oh, well, then, call it off with one," I said. And with a sigh I tossed him one of the rubies and dropped the other in the pocket of my smoking-jacket. Billings wiped his forehead, and then he thanked me and wiped his eyes.

"So good of you to give in, old chap," he snuffled. "Never will forget you for it!"

"Oh, I say, chuck it, you know!" I protested.

"Whole family will thank you," he went on in his handkerchief. "Princely magnanimity and all that sort of thing—you'll just have to come up for the week end with me this—"

"I was so startled I lost the grip on my monocle."

"I will!" I reached forward eagerly and insisted on shaking hands. By Jove, what luck!

And Billings looked regularly overcome. All he could do was just shake his head and pump my arm. Why, dash it, this seemed to affect him more even than giving in about the ruby. It was the first time I had ever accepted his invitation, you know.

"Tell you what, old chap," he said, as soon as he could speak. "I'm going to tell you what to do with that other stone. You save that for her."

"Her!" By Jove, I was so startled I lost the grip on my monocle. Billings nodded emphatically.

"Yes, sir—for her; she'll be along one of these days."

"By Jove, you know!" I was almost dizzy with a sudden idea. I fished out the jewel and held it before my glass, squinting doubtfully at it. I wondered if it was good enough for her."

"I say, Billings," I murmured thoughtfully. "Blondes or brunettes, you know—which wear rubies?"

"Both!" He said it with a kind of jaw snap. "They wear anything in the jewel line they can freeze on to."

"But which—"

"The worst? Blondes, my boy—" blondes, every time; especially those going around in black." Billings spoke gloomily. "Let me tell you, my boy—and I know—don't you ever have anything to do with a blonde if she's in black, especially black silk—hear?"

By Jove, his uplifted finger and fierce way of saying it gave me a regular turn, you know. But then there was the ruby, and I was thinking that—

"Perhaps the four of them in a bracelet," I muttered, "with something else to help out. They might do."

"They might," said Billings in a tone of coarse sarcasm. "They might do for a queen!"

I flashed a quick look at him. "Just what I was thinking," I answered gently.

"Meantime," said Billings, yawning, "let's go to bed."

And just as I rang for Jenkins I suddenly was seized with a perfectly ripping idea that checked a long yawn right in the middle and almost broke my jaw. For I saw how I could do something handsome that would even up with Billings in a way for the ruby he wouldn't take.

"Tell you what, old chap," I said, slapping him on the shoulder, "you are going to have them tonight!"

"Have—have what?" burst from him. "Rubies? I tell you I won't take another—"

"Rubies!" I ejaculated contemptuously. "Rubies nothing! Something better—something worth while, dash it!"

I saw he would never guess it.

"Why, you shall sleep in the pajamas from China," I exclaimed. And gathering them, I placed them in his hands.

"By George, Dicky!" Billings' face showed feeling. "Baw! Infernally clever of you, old chap! How thundering timely, too!"

He held them up singly, studying their outlines critically.

"And see here, Dicky—why, great Thomas cats!" His eyes turned on me wonderingly. "Never noticed it before—did you? But I do believe they are just my size!"

CHAPTER X.

A Nocturnal Intrusion.

"Oh, but I say, it's impossible, you know!" And I stared at Jenkins incredulously.

He grinned foolishly. "I know, sir; but he's in 'em, just the same, and I must say they do fit lovely—just easy-like."

"By Jove!" I gasped helplessly. "Then the jolly things must be made of rubber, that's all! Why, look here, he weighs over three hundred pounds, you know!"

Jenkins' head wagged sagaciously. "I think that's how it is, sir; it's wonderful what they do with rubber now; my brother wears a rubber clock bandage that ain't no bigger round than my arm when it's off of him, and he—"

"Dare say," I said sleepily as I fell back upon my pillow. "Good night, Jenkins; hope you'll get enough sleep to make up for the other night."

Jenkins sighed as he punched out the light. "Thank you, sir—and good-night," he murmured.

How long I slept I cannot tell, as they say in stories, you know; but I was brought jolly wide awake by a light that shone through the bedroom's open door. For if there's one thing will wake me quicker than everything else it's a light in the room at night. Fact is, I always want it as black as the what's-its-name cave, or else I can't sleep. And this light came from the small electric stand on the writing-desk. I could tell that by the way it shone.

And just then the little silver gong in there chimed three. Jolly rum hour for anybody to be up unless they were having some fun or were sick. So I raised my head and called softly:

"Jenkins—or—Billings!"

No answer. Reluctantly I swung out and stepped within the next room. 'Not a soul there, by Jove! Then I moved over to Billings' door, which was wide open for coyness, like my own. I could not see the shadowed alcove in which the bed was placed, and so I stood there hesitating, hating awfully to risk the possibility of disturbing him, don't you know. And just then my eyes, ranging sleepily across the room toward the private hall, were startled by the apparition of an open doorway.

Started, all right! And yet, by Jove, I was in such a jolly fog, I just stood there, nodding and batting it for a full minute before I could take it in.

"What I call devilish queer," I decided. I walked over and stuck my head into the dark hall.

"Billings! Jenkins!" I whispered.

By Jove, not a word! Everything as silent as the tomb!

I didn't like it a bit—so mysterious, you know. Besides, dash it, the thing was getting me all waked up! I just knew if once I got excited and thoroughly awake, it would take me nearly ten minutes to get to sleep again. And, by Jove, just then the excitement came, for I got hold of the fact after I had stared at it a while, that the door of my apartment opening into the outer corridor was standing ajar. Why, dash it, it was not only standing, it was moving. Then suddenly the broad streak of light from the corridor widened under the impulse of a freshening breeze, and the door swung open with a bang.

And then I heard my name spoken. By Jove, I had been standing there with my mouth open, bobbing my head like a silly dodo; but, give you my word, I was suddenly wide awake as a jolly owl wagon!

Away down the corridor, by the mail chute, a man was standing, reading a framed placard. Nothing particularly remarkable in this, but as the door banged he turned his head sharply and ejaculated:

"Dammitt! Now, that will wake Lightnut!"

I was surprised, because I couldn't recall ever having seen him before; yet, standing as he did under the light, I had opportunity for a devilish good view.

He was a heavy set old party, rather baldish, with snowy mutton chops and a beefy complexion that was jolly well tanned below the hatband line, you know. The kind of old boy you size up as one of the prime feeder sort and fond of looking on the wine when it is Oporto red. Had something of the cut of the retired India colonels one sees about the Service clubs in London—straight as a lamp post still, but out of training and in devilish need of tapping—that sort of duck, you know!

What a respectable-looking old party might be up to, wandering around a bachelor apartment building at three in the morning, was none of my business. What's more, you know, I didn't care a jolly hang. But the thing that dashed me was that just as I moved toward the door to close it, he uttered my name again and came straight toward me as though to speak.

So I had to wait, by Jove, for I couldn't close the door in his face. Awfully rotten thing to do—that, you know.

"Lost his floor and wants to inquire," I decided.

And then as he toddled across the last yard and stopped before me, I saw that the old chap was in his night things—some darkish sort of pajamas.

"By George!" he exclaimed with a leer that showed his almost toothless old gums. "But you never would guess what I got up for!"

No, dash it, I didn't even care to try. I just coughed a little.

ISLES OF SCILLY CANADA WEEK IN CHICAGO

Group That Are Situated Southwest of England.

Period at Which Islands Were Separated from the Mainland Must Be Far Beyond the Reach of History.

CANADIAN EXHIBITS AT LIVE STOCK AND LAND SHOWS CENTER OF ATTRACTION.

London—People sometimes apply the term Lyonesse to the whole of Cornwall, which is a mistake. If there ever was such a land at all it lay westward of Cornwall, and the Scilly Isles are its relics. The name of Arthur plays like a lambent light about the district; but the period at which the Scillies were separated from the mainland must be far beyond the reach of history, which in England can only explore about two thousand years backward. The Lyonesse of romance extended to the southwest of Land's End, and was connected in race and legend with the Leon of Brittany. As a matter of geology the tradition has no satisfactory basis, though there are traces of submerged forests in Mount's Bay, and the old Cornish name of St. Michael's Mount represents that rock as having once stood in the center of woodland. In reality the islands are the last upheavals of that backbone of granite which is so impressive on Dartmoor and which again comes into notice on the Bodmin Moors. True, ocean depths do not begin till far beyond the islands, so that in its relation to the great submarine platform Scilly may be considered structurally attached to Britain, as Britain is to the Continent. Some portion of the vanished region may have survived, adjoining the coasts of Mount's Bay, till the year 1099, when, according to the Saxon chronicle, Lyonesse was destroyed in a great tempest.

When we come to the genuine history of Scilly there are some interesting things to notice. The islands seem to have been used as a penal settlement in Roman times; and in the sixth century they gave a home to the Welch St. Samson, who became bishop of Dol, and who has left footprints in Guernsey as well as in Devon and Cornwall. The Isle of Samson is now uninhabited, but it may have had a fairly large population when the saint established an oratory here; there are many traces of early occupation. To many it is still more interesting as the home of Walter Besant's Armored. Early in the tenth century Athelstan made a conquering expedition through Cornwall, and is said to have sited these isles from the high land at St. Buryan—the day must have been uncommonly clear. He vowed to build a church on the spot where he stood if he returned safely from their conquest. Probably he met with little resistance on the islands, where he is supposed to have founded Tresco Abbey. Later, in the same century, a Scillonian had the credit of converting the fierce King Olaf of Norway. After harrying the coast of Britain and Ireland Olaf sighted the Scillies and ran his vessel into what is now the harbor of St. Mary's. A hermit here gave him timely warning of a mutiny that was about to take place among his own troops; he crushed the revolt, but was severely wounded. Carried to the monastery at Tresco, he was there nursed into health and Christianity, consenting to receive baptism.

PLAN TO LOWER LIVING COST

Columbus Graduates Say Auction of Foodstuffs Would Help the People.

New York.—The establishment of city markets at which food products shall be sold by auction to retailers and consumers is the remedy for the high cost of living proposed by a committee of Columbus graduate students which has been making an extensive inquiry into the subject. This scheme, the committee believes, is the best means of cutting down unnecessary costs in distribution, as it would do away with jobbers.

Hurt Saving Doll.

Meanest Thief Sought.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The police are searching for the meanest thief in the world, who stole $2.01 which Lois Sample, aged twelve years, had saved.

The hats were doffed to Canada during the two weeks of the Land Show and the week of the Live Stock Show at Chicago. Willing to display its goods, anxious to let the people of the central states know what could be produced on Canadian farm lands, and the quality of the article, Hon. Dr. Roche, minister of the interior of Canada, directed that sufficient space be secured at the United States Land Show, recently held, to give some adequate idea of the field resources of western Canada. Those in charge had splendid location, and installed one of the most attractive grain and grass exhibits ever seen anywhere. Thousands, anxious to get "back to the land," saw the exhibit, saw wheat that weighed 68 pounds to the measured bushel, oats that went 48 and barley that tipped the scales at 55 pounds. The clover, the alfalfa, the wild pea vine and vetch, the rye grass, the red-top and many other succulent and nutritious varieties of wild grasses demanded and deserved from their prominence and quality the attention they received. The grain in the straw, bright in color, and carrying heads that gave evidence of the truth of the statements of Mr. W. J. White of Ottawa, and his attendants, that the wheat would average 28 to 35 bushels and over per acre, the oats 55 to 105 bushels, the flax 12 to 28 bushels, were strongly in evidence, and arranged with artistic taste on the walls. The vegetable exhibit was a surprise to the visitors. Potatoes, turnips, cabbage—in fact, all of it proved that not only in grains was western Canada prominent, but in vegetables it could successfully compete with the world.

One of the unique and successful features of the exhibit was the successful and systematic daily distribution of bread made from Canadian flour. It was a treat to those who got it. Canadian butter, Canadian cheese and Canadian honey helped to complete an exhibit that revealed in a splendid way the great resources of a country in which so many Americans have made their home.

A feature of the exhibit was the placards, announcing the several recent successes of Canadian farm produce and live stock in strong competition with exhibits from other countries. There was posted the Leager Wheeler championship prize for Marquis wheat grown at Roathorn in 1911, beating the world. Then I. Holmes of Cardston entered the competitive field at Lethbridge Dry Farming Congress, and won the wheat championship of 1912, beating Mr. Wheeler with the same variety of wheat. Hill & Sons of Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, in 1911, won the Colorado silver trophy for best oats grown, competed for in a big competition at Columbus, Ohio, in 1911. The produce of British Columbia at the New York Land Show in 1911 carried off the world's championship for potatoes, and incidentally won a $1,000 silver trophy, and then, a few days ago, the same province carried off the world's prize for apples at the Horticultural Show in London, England.

But that was not all. These Canadians, who had the temerity to state that corn was not the only feed for finishing high-grade beef cattle, entered for the fat steer championship at the Live Stock Show in Chicago a polled Angus—"Glencarnock Victor." Nearly 300 entries were in the field. "Glencarnock Victor" didn't know a kernel of corn from a Brazilian walnut. There were Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and their corn-fed article, determined to win, bound to beat this black animal from the north, and his "nothing but prairie grass, oats and barley feed," as his owner proudly stated, but they didn't. Canada and McGregor & Sons, with their "Glencarnock Victor," won, and today the swiftness of America is eating of his steaks and roasts—the champion steer of the world.

But once more the herd of cattle that won the Sweepstakes at the same show was bred and owned by the owners of "Glencarnock Victor," fed only on prairie grass, oats and barley, near Brandon, Manitoba. The royal reception given to Mr. McGregor on his return to his home town was well deserved.

Omission must not be made of the wonderful and beautiful display of apples made by British Columbia, occupying a full half section of the great Land Show. This was in personal charge of Mr. W. E. Scott, deputy minister of agriculture for that province, who was not only a host to those who visited the exhibit, but was also an encyclopedia of information regarding the resources of that country. With 200,000 Americans going to western Canada this year, it is pleasing to know that so many from this side of the line can participate in the honors coming to that new country.—Advertisement.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Happy New Year!
Ask Robert W. if camphor gum is a good substitute for candy.
A good name in man and woman, dear my Lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their soul;
Who steals my purse, steal trash, something, nothing,
'Twas mine, 'tis his and has been to thousands.
But he who filches from me my good name
Takes that which not enriches him
And makes me poor indeed.
(Ask Bertha if she knows the above verse by heart.)
Why was Mary greener than usual last Thursday.
No school this week and none next.
All the teachers have deserted Antioch, but we soon shall see them drifting back here again.
The H. S. room had quite a time deciding whether or not they would exchange gifts. The vote resulted in 25 to 11 to the affirmatives and some did not vote either way.
Such shouts as these still come from the foot ball field: 'Ouch, my skin,' 'kill 'em,' 'go it, Steve.'

Useful for Orators.

At a musical exposition in Berlin an invention for increasing the resonance of the voice was exhibited. It consists of a film, which is applied to the roof of the mouth and acts as a sounding board. It is intended for the use of orators, officers, and anyone wishing to increase the reach of the voice, as well as musicians.

Sexual Difference.

A woman is afraid she'll get a chance to be tempted, and a man that he won't.—New York Press.

Sensitive Plant Life.

The craving of plants and trees for water has sometimes led them to terrible extremes. A poplar has been known to burrow beneath a wall, under a road, and down a well—all in search of water, and a pertinacious turnip which got the tip of its root into the crack in a field drain went on and on until it was six feet long in the drain. So sensitive is the tip of the root on the water question that Darwin declared it must have a brain in it.

Good Object Lesson.

The pupils of a Cleveland (Ohio) school have taken part in a dramatic sketch before the moving picture camera, and their youthful figures and the lesson they teach will soon be known throughout the land. For it is a lesson that they are teaching—the lesson of the importance of the care of the teeth.

Method of Bleaching Ivory.

To bleach ivory ornaments or piano keys the following method works well. The ornaments are first washed or "soaked." If possible, in a bath of unslaked lime, which has in it a few ounces of bran and water. This should make a pasty solution if properly mixed, and will bleach the ivory which is discolored or stained. It should be rubbed off with a cloth and the ivory dried in magnesia powder. After a few minutes a few strokes with a cloth gives the ivory a brilliant polish.

"Wise-Acres."

"Wise-acre" has its origin in Ben Jonson's retort to a countryman who boasted interminably of his acres, till Ben said: "What signify to us your dirt and your clods? Where you have an acre of land I have ten acres of wit." The countryman retorted by calling Ben "Good Mr. Wiseacre." This is a good story, but perhaps the term wiseacre comes from the corruption of the German, weisager, a wise-sayer.

Remained Long Under Water.

The Paris swimming-master, Poulliquen, accomplished a remarkable feat recently by remaining six minutes twenty seconds under water. His previous best performance was four minutes thirty-one seconds. M. Poulliquen seemed quite fresh after his exploit, and in proof of it jumped into the water again and swam thirty yards at full speed.

Hideous Trousers.

Further, it is pointed out, the trouser leg was draughty and cold, and at the same time drags itself into hideous contortions with every movement of the leg. In the nether garment of celebrities distortions were described suggestive of concertinas, corkscrews, and buckled tubes.—Exchange.

Not Really Serious.

"My cases are all simple ones, such as stealing boxes of matches and handkerchiefs, and bigamy," said a prisoner at Kingston-on-Thames court, after 28 previous convictions had been proved against him.—London Mail.

Miss Zoula Cambell entertained a number of her friends at the parsonage Christmas evening. About twenty five were present and enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

A number of the friends of Mrs. W. F. Ziegler were entertained at her home Saturday afternoon, at a piano recital given by a portion of her large class of pupils. The program consisted of thirteen numbers, and each one rendered in a manner reflecting credit upon both teacher and pupil. The afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Mary Smith, passed away at her home in Grayslake, Tuesday morning of this week, after an illness of only two days, the cause being uraemic poison coupled with pneumonia. The deceased was a sister of Mrs. William Bartlett of this place and was quite well known here by reason of her many visits to this place. The funeral services were held at Grayslake today (Thursday.)

come increased power and higher wisdom to direct and control it for the help and uplifting of mankind.

The faith sees the life and growth, in the color and warmth of spring, in the lengthening days of winter. They perceive that the world of men and women, and of the children, too, though still far from the full tide of its summer, is already well into the long new year of the human family. They are as certain of the spring for all mankind as they are that January will pass and May will come.

This May Be the Reason.
"Why is it that so many people keep on getting caught in mining swindles?" "I think it must be because there is always somebody around who is willing to accept money from others who think the more apparent a swindle is the less likely it is to prove what it seems."

What Is Not Good.

It is only because they are unused to the taste of what is excellent that the generality of people take delight in silly or insipid things.—Goethe.

Sympathetic Judge.

A middle aged woman, who was charged at Marylebone (Eng.) with being drunk, was said to have been found lying fast asleep in a garden on a quantity of cut flowers. "I must say I feel a little sorry for you," said Mr. Plowden. "Asleep on a bed of flowers—wakened up and brought back to this wicked world. It must have caused you a shock. You may go with a caution."

Kitten in Revolt.
A remarkable case of filial ingratitude on the part of a black kitten has occurred in Liverpool, England. A few days ago a customer threw a piece of meat between them, which was secured by the mother cat. To the surprise of everybody, the kitten sprang at his mother and drove her out of the house. Since then he has mounted guard over the doors to prevent her return, and, although she has attempted time after time to return to her old home, her stern, unbending, and ungrateful son bars the way.

Ocean Denizens.
According to Sir John Murray, one of the greatest authorities on oceanography, the bottom is a desert of pitch-black darkness, penetrating cold, and eternal silence. Worms, sea puddings, and coral polyps sluggishly crawl or sway in the almost currentless depths, and only two species of fish, both of them, with much head and little body, have been found deeper than a mile and a quarter down.

Opposition.
A Blair county barrister recently handed a brief up to the court in which he thus described his two brethren on the other side: "They are like two ghouls in a country graveyard seeking a carcass to devour."—Philadelphia Record.

Legal Repartee.
"And now I mean to handle your witnesses without gloves," said a counsel, whose witnesses had met with rather severe treatment from the other side. "Indeed! That's more than I should like to do with yours," smilingly retorted his learned friend.

Dust Laying in England.
The highway department of the city of Leeds, England, has recently treated portions of a macadam roadway with granular calcium chloride to combat the dust. Solutions of the latter had previously been tried at greater cost and without such satisfactory results. The road is first well swept and two applications of the chloride are made on succeeding evenings of about one-half pound per yard.

Somewhat Ambiguous.
A missionary stationed in a land where the natives were cannibals, wrote for assistance as follows: "Our small force of brethren seems to be unable to cope with the distress which prevails in the dark and benighted land. Please send a few more missionaries."—Sunday Magazine.
